

The Rise of Conspiracy Physics

by Miles Mathis

First published September 15, 2025

On September 11, figures, Dan Kagan-Kans, figures, of the Wall Street Journal published an article entitled “The Rise of Conspiracy Physics.” Hmmm, I wonder who he could be addressing there? My readers saw it immediately, of course. The Phoenicians have become so transparent it is embarrassing to watch them. They are unembarrassable, of course, since they can't see past The Family's eyelashes, living in a cocoon of impenetrable mendacity, but we are embarrassed for them.

The article is surpassingly weak, also as usual, but it does go to prove what I have been saying for years: this is all about framing and controlling the opposition, trying to keep eyes off me. Dan here tries to sell the idea that physics is collapsing due to a couple of Youtubers like Sabine Hossenfelder and Eric Weinstein pretending to attack it, but everyone inside and outside of the field knows I am the real center of this revolution. For Dan and the mainstream, I remain the one that cannot be named.

Why? Because Hossenfelder and Weinstein and these other bozos aren't doing any real physics, and never have. So how could they be any danger to the field? Sabine has been retired for years, now just yapping about other people's ideas, and Weinstein is also just a mouth running. He is a hedgefund millionaire who tried to buy himself into the upper echelon of theoretical physics a few years ago, I guess by bribing a couple of guys at Oxford, but after I cut his legs out from under him in 2013 he slunk off to Youtube as well, where his buddies can fake his numbers, while whining about the unfairness of it all. When you compare their oeuvres to mine, it is a gigantic mismatch. What have they done that begins to compare with diagramming the atomic nucleus, achieving unification, rewriting all the equations of Relativity from the ground up, solving the Bode problem, explaining the Solar Cycles (with the first accurate prediction of a cycle in history), rewriting the Lagrangian, unifying all the quantum particles, redefining the derivative, explaining the fine structure constant, rewriting solid state, rewriting pressure flow, rewriting color theory, rewriting core theory, rewriting molecular bonding, and literally hundreds of other things. I have now published over 40 books worth of new physics, comprising around 14,000 book pages, on my science site (and another 105 books on my history/art site). What of similar import have they done? Zip. Like their cousins in other fields, they do nothing but camp out and blow smoke up your shorts 24/7. They are so pathetic they aren't even worth debating. One simply shoos them like flies.

Physics is now so dead you could carbon date it, and this article at the WSJ just proves that once again, as mainstream physicists have to beg the mainstream magazine writers to protect them from me. The major search engines delisting me wasn't enough, so call in the mainstream press, the Operation Mockingbird stooges. But as you see, that also fails, since the mainstream mags are also in the toilet, with only a tithe of their old readership and the dregs of writers to choose from. What self-respecting writer would take this propaganda assignment? Hard to say, since none of us have seen a self-respecting writer in ages. There may be some few out there, but you are unlikely to run across them since they are not useful to the status quo. You will certainly not see them published by the known presses. It is all the sickeningly thin and runny Mesmerism you get from the various Kagans and Cohens and Pollacks, toting for their cousins in the banks and military, assuring you everything is kosher and that you know everything you could possibly ever know. As Sean Carroll—Weinstein's propped up “Preposterous Universe” adversary in the mainstream—says, physicists already know everything, so there are no problems left to solve. Carroll didn't solve any of them—he is just another tote-boy and dripping mouth—but his paymasters and their grandfathers did, so you can go back to sleep. The universe is just a hologram or bad dream anyway, so shut up and calculate, or don't even calculate, whatever, just shut up and let the same people collect the prizes and make the money they always did, since that is how the hologram goes.

So you now begin to see Weinstein's new function. In these canned debates with Carroll, Carroll doesn't have to respond to my major papers, he only has to respond to the first five sentences of Weinstein's pretend paper, while they both smirk and puff and pretend to be outraged. People watch and think this is the extent of the revolution. Once Weinstein is defeated or given a conciliatory chair somewhere in Israel or the Caymans, mainstream physics can return to its Modern quest to snorkel as deep into worldwide treasuries as possible, while continuing to pretend I never existed. Over the next century they can silently absorb all my discoveries, while letting their grandchildren take the credit.